"He said both the government and the company have a moral obligation to keep the mill going until the conversion is completed.

"The 'question is whether economics can justify the disruption of people's lives. I happen to think it shouldn't,"

The decision to convert the was originally made while the NDP was in government and Lester said no one is arguing against the conversion.

Government studies say the soft sulphite maket will make it economically unsound to keep the mill going but Lester contended the mill is making money and is "easily opera-tional for a period of time."

63% Oppose Mall Closing

Downtown businesses are 63.1 per cent opposed to trial closure of the Government Street mall, a survey conducted by the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce shows.

Chamber president Alan Emery said Thursday "he's disappointed that the businesses involved didn't even want to have a flyer at a three-anouth trial closure.

"I don't think they had a heck of a lot to lose," said Emery.

Traffic has dropped on Government Street because of the survey results to city council and "anyone else that wants them."

A tofal of 103 businesses responded to the questionnaire; le of them with businesses on Government Street, only three of 16, were in favor of a trial closure. Whereas those with businesses and three will forward the survey results to city council and "anyone else that wants them."

But it's short term aid that Prince Rupert needs to tide it over the lean years looming close. As Mayor Peter Lester said this week, the layoff's ripple effect will mean more like 700 jobs affected. In a town of 15,000 that may not be fatal, but it is a severe body

The loss to Prince Rupert's tax rolls is also considerable, several hundred thousand dollars each year while the mill is being converted.

More than manpower retraining schemes and relocation grants are needed. A town can't relocate. The government is said to be doing dividuals laid off, but the town of And in the long term, Prince Prince Rupert needs help too.

Numbers Without Number

The fringe religious groups who are alarmed at the rapid growth in issuing people with multi-digit numbers for lifetime use may not be the crackpots they appear to be. Civil libertarians who wonder out loud about the approach of a 1984-style society get a more respectful hearing these days.

American fundamentalists spread stories about a mammoth computer run by the European Common Market which is supposed to be ready to allot numbers to everyone in the world which will be invisibly printed on people's foreheads.

That's nonsense, of course. But has anyone pondered the implications here in Canada of a similar trend?

Today a SIN is required for almost everything. The practicality, the necessity of one for employment is easily demonstrated. How else can ten million separate unemployment insurance and Canada pension deductions be accurately charted? For income tax purposes, it's also a demonstrated necessity.

Nothing could be as remote from the truth that the limited boundaries of the island hinder our understanding. On the contrary, we are generally well aware of what's going on including what is often mentioned as "the French fact."

If the French fact was just merely the desire of presentation of a language and a culture, no one in his right mind would have any reservations or voice any objection. But when the French fact means a preferential treatment of Quebec in many areas that have nothing to do with culture, the unjust treatment of children of im-migrants that are denied their right of an education in English, if they prefer to attend English schools, the air controllers' and pilots' dispute and so on and on. everyone with a fair mind and a sense of justice can really grasp the true meaning of the French fact — not an ideological struggle for intellectual and spiritual values, but a search after political and financial power. - E. Dog Lovers Reply

With reference to your recent To The Point column condemning the domestic dog as the worst cause of pollution and the spread of disease. I must express concern over your biased and one-sided article.

The dog has been the servant of man since pre-history, and since man is populating the earth in ever-increasing numbers, it would appear that he has sur vived what you consider to be this highly dangerous relationship with little dif-ficulty. Man has derived enormous benefits from his association with the dog — not only in the fields of work and sport, but in terms of sheer human pleasure in canine companionship.

The onus is on dog owners, however, to prevent their animals from annoying other people or damaging property, and all-serious breeders do their best to ensure that their puppies are placed in homes where this fact and other responsibilities of owning a dog are recognized. Stricter leash laws are not necessarily the answer to your complaint - one cannot legislate common sense.

A major concern throughout North America is the unwanted, surplus pet population and you may be aware of current publicity urging owners to have their dogs growth of this surplus.

I fail to see the connection between nutritional standards in dog foods and your suggestion that old age pensioners live on tea and toast — you can hardly blame dogs for such a situation, in a country where vast quantities of food have been destroyed because there is insufficient de mand for it at the market price.

May I suggest that your editorial efforts might be better directed towards correction of the long-standing pollution problem of the Clover Point sewage outfall, a matter which would appe somewhat more pressing concern? Barbara R. Watt, President, Victoria City

Regional organizers for the party purse their lips and think carefully before giving an opinion on her drawing power. They are hard-headed men who know the party is doing well partly because the economy is in troubles that no government could solve

They don't give her much credit for the party's current surge. They think the polls are too harsh, but not off base.

Young Tory backbenchers grumble over their sundowners that Mrs. Thatcher seems to be almost pathologically unwilling to give them a chance to take on dingly ironic that they lined up behind her in the January, 1975, leadership ballot precisely because they thought she meant golden dawn of new political opportunities.

Callaghan's Patronizing

Her own performance in the House of Commons is thoughtful and skilful but lacklustre. Harold Wilson used to pull out all the stops to bedazzle her, occasionally falling flat on his face. James Callaghan benevolently patronizes her with glowing tributes and honeyed words and carries on as-if she were not there.

This is a time of big trouble for Callaghan. His left wing is kicking him in the teeth over the massive public spending cuts, the unions are restive over declining living standards while maintaining their wage restraint deal, two nationalist-tending Scottish Labor MPs have threatened his already minority voting strength by announcing they will no longer automatically vote with Labor and every day seems to be a new sterling crisis.

He could be forced into a general election and the Conservatives might win. If ever a party would be shouting for the quick help of the civil service to keep the ship of state afloat it would seem to be the Conservative cabinet that would be formed of the current shadow front bench.

New Zealanders Divided By Rugby Tour Boycott

The African boycott of the Olympics means that one of the most successful multi-racial societies is being held up before the world as an example of racism. And it stems from New Zealand's passion for rugby football.

Rugby in New Zealand is more a way of life than a game, a substantial subculture to which most New Zealanders give allegiance. In common with some other ex-colonial societies New Zealand uses rugby as a focus for the vigour and energy which erupts in any newly colonised land and which remains long after the natural environment has been tarned and put to use. This is why the internal debate over the Pretoria connection has assumed political proportions much beyond its immediate cause and has now spilled over into the international arena.

The debate has simmerca with periodic cruptions since 1960. Before that New Zealand had always played rugby by the South African rules, which is to say teams travelling to that country contained no Polynesians. But in 1960 liberals decided that this was taking the fabled New Zealand politeness too far. Consequently they fought a successful campaign' under the slogan No Maoris—No Tour and Pretoria has subsequently welcomed Maoris as a part of All Black teams, including the current one. But the campaign did something else and that was to stimulate interest in South Africa generally and from this grew a group of voluntary associations with the avowed purpose of ending the South African sporting connection in all its manifestations.

Foremost among these groups is Halt All Racist Tours which numbers its membership in tens of thousands. So im-

New Zealand elections have been fought on this issue. In 1972 the landslide success of the Kirk Labour government could be ascribed partly to assurances that a Labour government would not interfere with the Springbok tour in 1973. Kirk reneged on this promise on the advice of his own police commissioner on the grounds that police would be unable to cope with the violence if the tour took place, and this was doubtless a factor in the landslide victory of Rob Muldoon's National party in 1975. National promised not to interfere with the proposed All Black tour and have kept their word, but the result has been a bitter polarization of New Zealand society the like of which has not been seen since the Demonstrators disrupted the World Softball Series in New Zealand in December in which South Africa participated, by continual chanting and by flour bombing from low flying air-craft. The departure of the All Blacks last month had to be under police guard and by a circuitious route which failed to take in Australia because Australian unions had vowed that Any aircraft carrying All Blacks would never leave the ground if it landed there. And from mid June 1975 it was abundantly clear that the tour would place New Zealand on jeopardy of boycott at Montreal, particularly when it came to the much hoped for 1500 metres race between Tanzania's Filbert Bayi and the world record holder John Walker.

Some members of the New Zealand government are prepared to say privately that they believe that there will never be another All Black tour of South Africa. Perhaps they will soon be able to say so openly. Certainly because of the Olympic boycott New Zealand domestic politics will never be WELLINGTON - New Zealanders are in no mood to accept a large number of homeless Asians expelled from Africa whom Britain does not wish to take in.

Racial Tensions Heightened

This attitude became clear last month when New Zealand, which has for many years been internation known for its excellent handling of race relations, began to face up to the implications of allowing its "All Blacks" rugby team to tour South Africa.

Maoris accused white New Zealanders of racist attitudes on New Zealand television and there were reports that Malaysians considered at least part of New Zealand society to be

But it was determined not to dis-courage the All Blacks from touring South Africa. Its attitude was essentially that it was elected on a policy of noninterference in the affairs of sports organizations and that it would not change this policy under political pres-

Efforts by Ordia to win support internationally for a proposal that countries should boycott events at the Olympic Games in which New Zealand athletes take part did not shake the government's resolve. The government considered him unlikely to be successful in winning support for the proposal. It also dismissed suggestions that the because of its stand on the rugby issue.

Rob Muldoon told questioners that the Commonwealth 'not guarantee they will be able to stay, Games were two years away and Ordia might not be around then. In the country, however, the reaction was not as definite as the prime minister's.

Labor MP Richard Prebble declared that he saw the country's biggest problem as one of race relations - involving white New Zealanders, the native Maori race and thousands of Pacific islanders who have migrated here in recent years.

* * * In bars and in their homes New Zealanders argued this point. It was evident that they no longer took it for granted that the social path ahead would be trouble-free as far as racial

They also had in mind a controversial ing a Pacific Islander kicking for some time another man who lay huddled on the ground amid a crowd of people pushing to enter a hall in Auckland where a wrestling match was about to

Most New Zealanders believed that this type of behavior took place on the streets of crime-ridden New York or back-street Soho - not in their own

The television corporation has been criticized for showing this violence on screen. Police spokesmen retorted that the corporation had done a public ser vice by showing the reality of life in Auckland, the country's largest city with a population of about 600,000. It is islanders have migrated.

The government was also running into criticism over its policy towards the Pacific islands. It had declared an amnesty for Pacific islanders who con fess they are illegally in New Zealand, having either overstayed their entry permits or entered the country without only that their case to stay on will be

Pacific island leaders have argued that all those who seek amnesty should be permitted to stay. They add that, if the government will not accept this, it criteria they will be allowed to remain. The government argues that to publish the criteria would be basically to give its position away in that those isla illegally in the country who could not meet the criteria would have no incentive to give themselves up.

The argument between the govern ment and the island leaders adds strains to the racial situation.

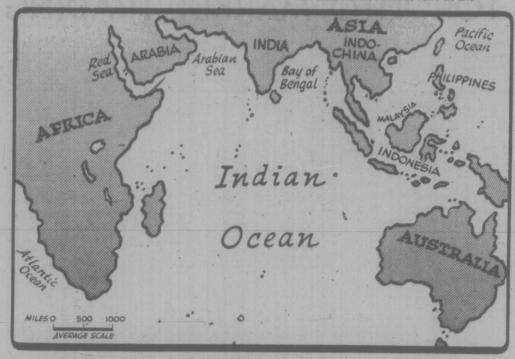

The Malaysians made their accusa tions after residents of a wealthy sub-urb in the capital of Wellington objected to the building in their area of a new structure for the Malaysian High

A colmnist in the Malay Times summed up their reasons: "The claim is that the buildings will block the view of Wellington harbor, there is danger of violent demonstrations, Malaysian food smells pungent — a polite word for offensive — and that the Malaysians will start drying their clothes from the windows. cosmetics and hair revivers, the soaps faithfully bought because they kept the hands younger — the purpose of all these was to prepare for a glamorous grand-parenthood. Eventually, it was under-stood, people would gaze at the results in amazement and say, "But you're too young to be a grandmother!"

I know people who were of grand-motherly and grandfatherly age five years ago and indeed looked too young for the job, but the grandchildren never arrived to give them the chance to enjoy the complito be parents, so when you met them. since it would have been impolitic to say, "But you look too old to be parents!" you were reduced to saying, "Pleased to meet you," which was not much reward for all those years of slimming and using the expensive

These people were all fitted out for grandparenthood and had nothing to do. They were in a holding pattern between youth and decrepitude. The airport was closed, as it were, to Grandparentville, and it was beginning to look as if they would have to keep circling overhead until the gas ran low and they were rerouted to Octogenaria. Some whose children were careful planners might eventually produce careful planners might eventually produce were ideal, but when this finally came to pass, the happy news could be expected to yield only an amazed, "But you're too old

The irony of the grandchildless genera-tion is that it was the fertile generation of the post Second-World-War years, which gave us all those wonderful kids who gave us the various revolutions of the 1960's, which gave us Gerald Ford. Some of them have been parents of fairly large families now for 30 years, which is long enough to be a parent of even a small family.

Poland Downs Japan

MONTREAL (CP) Soviet Union goes after Olym-pic volleyball gold on two fronts today after its men and women won semi-final clashes Thursday.

The Russian men downed Cuba 15-12, 15-7, 15-8 to qualify for the final against Poland, five-set winners over Japan by scores of 15-17, 15-6, 15-6, 10-15, 15-10.

The Russian women defeated Hungary earlier Thursday by 15-10, 15-10, 15-9 and will meet Japan in the final. Japan ousted South Korea 15-13, 15-6, 15-5.

Eric in Take-Charge Role As Lions Blast Tiger-Cats

Eric Guthrie took charge at Vancouver Plaursday night and guided British Columbia Lions to an impressive per-formance, that produced and guided Sritish Columbia Lions to an impressive per-formance that produced a 3 9-14 Canadian Football League triumph over Hamil-ton Tiger-Cats.

In his first starting assignment at quarterback for the Lions, Guthrje fired three touchdown passes and turned the Leos into a solid club after a shaky start before 15,731 fans.

Against Saskatchewan in their season-opener, the Lions were blasted 35-8. Thursday's other CFL contest must have left Montreal kicker Don Sweet with unpleasant memories of Cal-gary's McMahon Stadjum.

Calgary coach Bob Baker said Montreal has "one hell of a football team—where are they weak?"

"The addition of Andy Hop-The addition of Andy Hop-kins has strengthened Mon-treal's of once considerably." The act, who kicked off their secson with a win against Saskatchewan Rough-riders in Regina on Monday, appeared headed for their ripst western sweep in 11 years. But Calgary, which now has one tie and a loss in two outings, rallied for 17 points in the fourth quarter.

Willie Burden swept around the right side from 13 yards to play for Calgary's final touchdown and the Stampeders, who elected not to gamble for a twopoint convert, used Cyril McFall's kick to knot the score.

terback Sonny Wade quickly moved Alouettes to Calgary's 27 with passes to Johnny Rodgers and Peter Dalla Riva, But Sweet's kick was wide and Calgary's Larry Cates scooted out of the end zone to prevent the Als from pricking up, the winning point picking up the winning point on a single. "I'm a runner, not a kicker and I was only thinking of heading for that goal line," Cates said.

Calgary's other scoring came on Pisarcik's eight-yard pass to Tom Forzani, and McFall's first convert and field goals of 39 and 41 yards. Rodgers hauled in first-half touchdown passes of three points in the final 15 minutes.

Mike Strickland got two touchdowns for B.C., one on a pass from Canadian quarterpass from Canadian quarter-back Eric Guthrie and the other on a 10-yard romp. Jim Young, Slade Willis and Lou Harris got the other Lions' touchdowns, all on passes, two from Guthrie and the other from John Sciarra whocalled signals in the final quarter. Louis Passaglia boot-

Victoria probably won't be without a resident judge of the B.C. Supreme Court much longer.

Persistent rumors indicate Mr. Justice J. G. Ruttan will be taking up residence here and presiding over local cases in Supreme Court in the fall. The last resident Supreme Court judge was Mr. Justice R. B. Wootton who retired earlier this year.

Jack Ruttan is no stranger to Victoria, however. He was a lawyer prior to his Supreme Court appointment in 1956. He was then, at age 43, the youngest member of the court.

He was admitted to the bar in 1937 and was a member of the firm of Straith, Ruttan and Davidson. He was a vice-president of the Greater Victoria Arts Centre, vice-president of the Family and Children's Service, president of the Victoria Bar Association and a member of Oak Bay council.

Old-Fashioned Answer To Cooking Efficiency

4 # $ # B \ (•) # $ # $ # B R Back in the late 1800s a fellow named Edward Atkinson devised a highly efficient low-cost cooker called the Aladdin oven, and the reasoning behind his invention is just as simple rows at it was then. EARTH NEWS

...it tells you how

By his own account, Atkinson became concerned with the economics of contemporary cooking methods after reading some statistics on the cost of living. It seemed to him that a disproportionate part of the household budget was spent on food and its preairtight deflector made of tin. The deflector is shaped like a large spool standing on end, open only at the bottom, and this arrangement radiates heat into the interior without drying the food or tainting it with the products of combustion. was spent on food and its pre-paration, and he began an investigation that was to oc-cupy him over the next 10

Atkinson's studies revealed that the ordinary kitchen practices of the 1800s required the burning of far in excess of two pounds of coal for every pound of food processed. His answer to the high cost of cooking was a device that enabled one pound of kerosene The heat source trusty Aladdin, properly tended to ensure perfect burning — is placed under the table so — is placed under the table so the top of the chimney is just inside the deflector's base but doesn't touch the sides of the opening. Food is placed on and erround the deflector (or, alternatively, on a raised soapstone plate), and the heat from the lighted lamp cooks the dishes slowly and thoroughly to a state of delicious tenderness.

The general principle beabled one pound of kerosene to do the work of 50 to 70 pounds of coal. It took its name from the heat source: the familiar Aladdin lamp. The Aladdin oven is really a very simple affair. The

The Aladdin oven is really a very simple affair. The cooker itself is merely two-thirds of a common wooden barrel (or some other container made of a material that conducts heat poorly, this being the factor that governs the oven's effectiveness).

The drum is inverted over a sheet-iron table pierced in the centre by a hole about three inches in diameter. The opening does not lead directly to the cooking chamber, but is closed off on the inside by an invention has been described as one of the most perfect substitutes for the Colonial brick oven and of the Polynesian earth oven or imu. The 19th-century inventor's contribution was to adapt the idea to the use of a novel heat source.

Kerosene lantern cookery received a most thorough and practical test on a large scale when it came to the attention of Booker T. Washington, then head of Tuskegee Institute in Alabama. He ordered the construction of a giant Atkinson-type oven made of pine planks plastered on the inside and heated by five lamps. This monster was used to feed more than 600 adult students, and the tough local beef and mutton were reportedly rendered tender and delicious by its slow and even processing.

But can that wooden barrel take the heat? No problem — Atkinson reported that he maintained an internal temperature of 500 degrees F for eight hours, and no scorching took place inside the barrel.

In practice, of course, you shouldn't cook at such temperatures anyhow. For a majority of the dishes, Canupp-Penrod used temperatures between 200 and 250 degrees. The airtight metal deflector is further insurance against ecorphing. It promotes a

Joseph Egoyan

Once again the fascinating study of interior decorating will be introduced to you by theoretical and practical analysis. These lectures will be held in the store and also supplemented by on location studies in selected homes including a visit to the residence of Mr. Egopan to discuss the problems arising in furniture arrangement, color schemes, lighting, styles, theme, drapery and carpet selection, and proper use of pictures and accessories.

Mr. Joseph Egoyan, B.A. ED., your instructor, is well qualified with extensive theoretical and practical knowledge. He is a graduate from the Art Institute of Chicago and the California College of Arts and Crafts; has taught at Oakland Tech. High Calif., the American College in Cairo and the Evening Adult Education program in Victoria. In addition, he has a wealth of practical experience in retail field as proprietor of Ego Arts Gallery in Cairo for five years, and Ego Interiors in Victoria for fourteen years. Mr. Egoyan is a qualified artist and has exhibited, his art works in a number of one-man shows in the U.A.R. and U.S.A. He won first prize in Vancouver Island Jury Show at the Art Gallery of Victoria, also a one-man show theme "BIRDS" was displayed at Burnaby Art Gallery and is now at Ego Interiors.

For the past eleven years this course in interior decorating has been given by Mr. Egovan twice yearly in three separate classes each week. At an average of twenty students in each class, almost a thousand students have taken the course to date.

THE CLASSES WILL BE HELD TUESDAY AFTERNOONS FROM 1 TO 2:30 P.M. AND ALSO EVENINGS ON MONDAY OR WEDNESDAY, 7:30 TO 9 P.M.

CLASSES START SEPT. 27th, 28th OR 29th AT EGO-INTERIORS. TOTAL COST OF SIX LECTURES ONCE A WEEK, $20.00.

Fishing Talks On with U.S.

WASHINGTON (FP)—Canada and the United States have started talks on how to implement a new 200-mile fishing zone without adversely affecting their respective fishing industries.

The first round of talks, described as preliminary, were held here. The two countries agreed to hold consultations with the states and provinces affected as well as industry representatives before meeting again.

A second meeting is scheduled in September.

The U.S. will proclaim its 200-mile zone next March 1.

The date was fixed as a compromise between the White House and the Democratic party-controlled

After the legislation fixing the date was passed, Canada announced that it would pro-claim its 200-mile limit next Jan. 1, three months ahead of Canada has already reached agreement with several other countries on fishing rights but the U.S. still has a long way to go unless an international treaty is implemented in the near future, which is unlikely. Thirty determined members of Greenpeace, a Canadian-based save-the-whales organization, left Honolulu harbor Thursday night to confront a sophisticated Japanese whaling fleet known to be converted. The Coast Guard sighting came a day after the James Bay, low on fuel, arrived at Honolulu harbor following an interest program to be converted. ident Bob Hunter said before

CANCER DRUG BATTLE

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration says the banned drug laetrile is not effective against cancer and may be dangerous, but some cancer patients contend they have the right to use it.

The FDA's battle to block use of lactrile in cancer treatment goes before a three-judge panel today. An immediate decision is not expected.

The hearing was set to re view the Aug. 15, 1975 decision by U.S. District Judge Luther Bohanon of Oklahoma City allowing cancer patient Glenn Rutherford of Conway Springs, Kan., to use the con-troversial drug manufactured from apricot pits.

The FDA, which questions safety and effectiveness of the drug, banned its use in the United States in 1963.

Rutherford was one of 15 cancer patients Bohanan ruled could import the drug, which is legal in Mexico, Canada, Germany, Japan and other countries. Two of the 15 have since died of the disease.

There have been estimates There have been estimates that as many as 50,000 Americans are now taking laetrile.

Every bridge player has often been plaqed in a position by the honest lead of the deuce (as the fourth-highest) to make sure of his contract via an end play, where otherwise he might have had to resort to a guessing finesse. Today's deal illustrates this point.

From the moment West's ace of clubs had been driven out, declarer had eight sure winners. Had an inexperienced player been sitting. South, he probably would now have guessed which way to take the finesse against the heart queen. And if he misguessed, he would then resort to a finesse of his diamond queen. When that lost to West, declarer would be down a trick.

our actual South declarer had no problem in bringing home his contract without resorting to any finesse. West's opening lead of the spade deuce, as his fourth-highest spade, indicated that West had been dealt exactly four spade's the had three higher spades, and there were none spades (he had three higher spades, and there were none lower). So, after cashing the board's queen and ten of clubs (West discarding a heart on the latter hand), declarer simply led dummy's nine of spades, throwing West into the lead.

After winning two tricks with his queen and eight of spades, West had no choice but to lead a red suit. And whichever he led (he chose a heart) would give declarer his game-going trick via a free finesse.

This deal also serves to illustrate why many of our better players are currently shy-South took the trick with his king. A low club was then led, West played low, and the board's king won. A club was played back, South's jack talling to West's ace. West returned the five of spades, South's ace capturing East's that for the leader's variety of the four than not, has greater practurned the five of spades, south's ace capturing East's that for the leader's variety. FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. HUNTER

Peter pointed to an old 1000-lira bill on the table. "Tve just figured out some-thing about the serial number, Dad," he declared. "Look." Tom looked. "I brought that back from the war. It's got a 7-digit serial number, but what's your eigmick?"

"An easy one," replied he boy. "If you take its last two digits and put them in front, you get 3 more than 8 times the number."

But it won't be easy to get the number! the number!

some varieties of dahlias, chrysanthemums, the Mi-chaelmas daisies and helen-iums and others to start flowering soon.

An inch layer of fresh grass clippings around these plants will prevent evaporation of the surface moisture and also prevent the sun's heat from drawing up the deeper mois-ture from the root area. The plants will then have dampness still at the roots during the two weeks of ab-sence — if you put it down there first with your long period of soaking.

Newly planted shrubs and Newly planted shrubs and young trees added to the garden this spring or early summer will be protected by the safe method — a good soaking, then a mulch laid loosely over the surface of the root spread. Root spread usually extends over a similar spread of branch or foligae width.

Tuberous begonias are a bit tricky unless they have been planted with space between. They need moisture at the roots, but rising moisture on a cool night may create a fungous condition on the leaves. For these, perhaps loosely laid dried grass would be better than fresh green laid over the damp soil. '

In the vegetable plot, an inch deep mulch along the last sowing of peas and beans will speed their growth after a soaking at the roots; young beets, spinach and swiss chard will avoid a check in growth with similar treatment. No further deep watering is likely to be needed while you are absent, although these more shallow rooting plants may need checking during the period. Their roots being nearer the surface, they are liable to be in the area of less moisture unless it is re-

depend on a constant supply of moisture at their roots. Give them a soaking, then lay grass clippings two inches deep if possible over the root areas. If the plants' leaves spread well over the area too, this will be extra natural protection to the soil in the con-servation of its moisture. Also, the fruits of these two vegetables grow and develop better when in the partial shade of their own broad fol-

Onions, garlic and shallots can be left to begin ripening. Water the garlic, but not the others; they must size and ripen. Do not mulch.

But for his grandfather, Rick Darrell Eric Gouge, 22, of 156 View Royal, would be staying in jail until Sept. 9, when he is to appear before Green for a pre-sentence re-port and sentence.

Gouge pleaded guilty to a vive-count charge of break-ins vith intent on the night of april 1-2 at five Greater Victoria businesses. Prosecutor Vicholas Lang said Gouge trove four male juveniles to the businesses, then stayed outside while one or more broke in.

Thursday, the three were charged with conspiring between May 12 and July 21 in Victoria county and elsewhere in B.C. "to commit the indictable offence of trafficking in cannabis resin," the official name for hashish. Barker, 19, of 1003 Russell, was placed on probation for two years and ordered to do 150 hours of community work. Barker pleaded guilty to a three-count Esquimalt charge of house break-ins and thefts Oct. 31, 1975, and April 24 and May 18, and a Victoria charge of possession March 28 of stolen lumber.

Lang said Gouge was on probation at the time and hadn't been reporting consistently to his probation officer. Legal Aid duty counsel John Stowell said Gouge was the only person to care for his blind, 79-year-old grandfather. The Saskatchewan plans envisage that the pay-TV service could cover virtually the whole province, with a federation of non-profit cable cooperatives buying rights to films and television series.

Shillington said the pay-TV system in Saskatoon could start operating as early as December, April at the latest, and systems in Moose Jaw and North Battleford should also be operating by April.

He stressed that the pay-TV programming would be controlled by the non-profit groups and that when the federal-provincial dispute over conventional c a b he is resolved, the conventional cable

PUBLIC HEARINGS

Commission on Vocational, Technical, and Trades Training Programs

The commission will be holding public hearings during August, September and October in the following centres:

-August 31 Nanaimo - September 1
Chilliwack - September 2
Dawson Creek - September 8 Prince George - September 9 -September 10

Kamloops Castlegar Vancouver -September 30 -October 1 -October 5

The government of British Columbia plans to introduce into the Legislature, a bill to govern colleges, vocational schools and other institutions involved with technical, vocational, or trade training. Groups or individuals interested in presenting briefs to the Commission on any aspect of vocational technical or trade training should forward them to:

Commissioner Dean H. Goard 4211 Kingsway, Burnaby, B.C. V5H 1Z6

Of particular interest to the Commission are governance, counselling (at all levels), facilities, entrance qualifications and selection procedures. Also of special concern are the roles of government, industry and educational institutions in training people for the labour force, as well as the financing of training and training institutions. Individuals or groups submitting briefs two weeks in advance of the hearing date will be assured a scheduled hearing.

The public is urged to attend these important hearings. Details of time and location of the hearings will be announced nearer the dates of the meetings.

Persistent rumors indicate Mr. Justice J. G. Ruttan will be taking up residence here and presiding over local cases in Supreme Court in the fall. The last resident Supreme Court judge was Mr. Justice R. B. Wootton who retired earlier this

Jack Ruttan is no stranger to Victoria, however. He was a lawyer prior to his Supreme Court appointment in 1956. He was then, at age 43, the youngest member of the court.

He was admitted to the bar in 1937 and was a member of the firm of Straith, Ruttan and Davidson. He was a vice-president of the Greater Victoria Arts Centre, vice-president of the Family and Children's Service, president of the Victoria Bar Association and a member of Oak Bay council.

Just over a year ago Town Talk reported Oak Bay council members "may yet get to sit on more comfortable chairs while they deliberate the municipality's business. Council members sit in wooden chairs which, charitably, can be described as uncomfortable. They are a far cry from the soft chairs enjoyed by Victoria and Saanich council members."

But not any more. Now Oak Bay is in the same comfort-

Seven new chairs in a soft fabric greeted council when it gathered last Monday. They cost just over $1,000.

Council's oldechairs — which have cushions, the only ones in the council chamber — have been inherited by the two-member press table plus the first row of seats in the chamber.

Venuti's Jazz Violin On Pops

Joe Venuti, an 82-year-old dynamo who plays the jazz violin with an unforgetable sound, is thefeatured per-former on Evening At Pops '76, Sunday, Aug. 1 at 8:00 p.m. on Public TV 9.

Venuti, who has been playing the violin since he was seven, wins whistles and cheers with his renditions of Gershwin's Summertime, Duke Ellington's C Jam Blues, Deep Purple, and Dvorak's Humouresque. He follows these performances with a four stringer — for which he loosens the normally taut bow string, places the violin in between the bow and the string, and plays all four strings of the violin at the same

Film Festival Continues

Public TV 9's Ingmar
Bergman Film Festival continues in August with The Magician, The Devil's Eye, Secrets of Women and The Seventh Seal. The Magician airing Thursday, August 5 at 9:00 p.m., is a fascinating and compelling parable of midnineteenth century Sweden. A wandering magician comes bearing a bag of tricks that turn him from magician into savior, then to con man, and finally to artist extraordinaire. Max von Sydow is featured in the title role, with ingrid Thurin as his wife.

The Magician was written and directed by Bergman, with photography by Gunnar Fischer and music under the direction of Erik Nordgren. The film was winner of the 1959 Venice Film Festival award. For a change of pace, the Bergman selection on August 29 at 9:00 p.m. This powerful drama of plague-stricken Europe concentrates on a disillusioned knight returning from the Crusades. Death appears before the knight (von Sydow), who begs for a chance to live A game of chess is proposed: death accepts, and begins to exact his toll one by one. The three narratives are told in flashback as the film builds from straight-froward realism to a colorful drama-of plague-stricken Europe concentrates on a disillusioned knight returning from the Crusades. The Individual as History

By MARILYN BOWERING

At the beginning of War & Other Measures we are reminded that "On May 18, 1966 at 2:15 p.m., Paul Joseph Chartier died in the men's washroom of the Canadian House of Commons when the dynamite he was carrying exploded."

Geddes' book is an attempt to imaginatively reconstruct the forces and resolved within received in this cost. The act the forces and psychology which resulted in this act. The attempt to animate history is familiar ground in poetry—Michael Ondaatje's Billy the Kid is one successful example that comes to mind. In the case of War & Other Measures, history, in the form of Chartier, remains without form, and

What Geddes has done is note the signs of the times: the irrationality of war where "reprisals" always outnumber enemy killed and where the innocent and best die, where soldiers return as "living dead . . . to jobs, to families/that never noticed the difference", and where "to be/so easily repaired, a wooder Indian,/to feel, intensely, nothing" is the most that can be asked.

In short, existence, in an unreasonable, meaningless world where the politicians "manufacture . . . destinies, some such perversion", and finally where "There is nothing . . beyond the descriptive act." The individual's identity exists only as material for history.

Although there is every reason to suppose that detachment and alienation form the basis for Chartier's one significant act, it is not advantageous to incorporate these feelings in the poems to the point where the poems are as listless and flat as the society they reflect; and this is what, disappoin-

There are an astounding number of poetic cliches in these poems for a poet of Geddes experience, including "fear, my constant companion", "head twisted oddly on its broken stem" and "never understanding the contours of his own mind". In lines like "Wrought-iron grill-work casts/strange shadows on the wall", it appears that enough energy cannot be summoned to be precise in observation.

That Geddes can, if he is interested, portray Sartrian "nausea" without limiting himself to the pace and tone of the depressed person, is evidenced in several of the poems. Chartier's detachment is described through a delicate and detailed observation of his hands:

and detailed observation of his hands My hands fascinate me, two live animals at my side. They feed me, light cigarettes, help themselves to my things. Night creatures, they live by day in my pockets.

I watch them fold and unfold,

move among the objects
on the table, wonder how much longer they will need me.

In another poem, Geddes demonstrates a nice sensitivity to the logic of disorder:

Now begins the breakup, the unnaming.
That old man on the road to Perpignan, breathing through a hole in his throat The hills behind him terraced to prevent erosion

More often, in War & Other Measures, events and characters are noted without valence. This results in a lack of focus and a fragmentation that defuses the potential impact of the poems, and is all the more regretful in that there are hints, in some of the poems, of real social and political

Sid Stephen's approach to history in Beothuck Poems is both more romantic and narrative than Geddes'. Stephen has taken the facts known about the Beothucks (the native Indians of Newfoundland who became extinct in 1829), and attempted to discover the meaning and feelings implicit in The Beothuck tragedy, which has been well-told in Peter Such's Riverrun and Keith Winter's Shananditti, is a story of cultural conflict, abetted on the European side by commerical and religious interests.

The French and English came to Newfoundland for fish, and the English, who landed and "dried the fish gaping open/on beaches and stones", were "watched by people/who came from the forests". The English took the fish "to the wharves of Genoa and Naples/to feed the good Catholics", and the stage for the clash of moral and property concepts between the cultures was set."

The step between trust and disaster Can't be seen When it is taken . A red hand hammer or awl, the resulting blood stains the roots of tolerance, which die and are washed out to sea.

There were retaliatory raids by the whites, and the Beothucks who survived the raids died of starvation as their access to traditional sources of food was cut off by European settlement and interests.

Stephen has more room to move in his subject than Geddes has. He is not restricted to a single event or person and so is able to approach the Beothucks with historical perspective, from "inside" their ceremonies and beliefs, from a European's point of view, and through the persons of Mary March and Shawnadithit — the two Beothuck women who were captured and "civilized" in an attempt by the government to make a human link between the Indian and White ment to make a human link between the Indian and White

In his ability to imagine the correspondences between such things as blood and the sun, and to present the logic of what was, to the Europeans, an appalling Beothuck custom of beheading their enemies and raising the heads on poles, Stephen's romanticism works to his advantage; in his treatment of the women, it leads to near absurdities.

He describes Shawnadithit as she makes the accurate drawings which provide much of what we know about the

> she takes the pen again but now Cormack sees that she is drawing with her lungs: bright bits of blood appear to mark her own redness on her handerkerchief,

on the paper other indians are drawn in red

This comes very near to being melodrama and to making that which he wishes to dignide appear silly rather than

Altogether, though, the sympathetic treatment in Beothuck Poems results in poems which are moving and sometimes profound. Stephen's compact language only occasionally makes for obscurity, and often conveys a sense of the power of the cycles, forces, and principles which make history more than contiguous events.

The Unique Artist

By JUDITH BURKETT

Wyeth's paintings affect viewers very differently. Many find his style stark and depressing, devoid of feeling. Others are aware of a remarkable tranquility, an honesty and an essential reality which calms and frees the mind. His revolutionary concept for com-position, the marvellous sub-tlety of his color, particularly his handling of white, and his technical perfection in the difficult but beautiful medium of egg tempera guarantee him a place among the masters.

The Art of Andrew Wyeth is a fine collection of all Wyeth's Wyeth admirer, it is complete

"Unique" is a word much colors and dry points as well as bandled about without regard for the strength of its meaning, but "unique" is precisely the word to describe Andrew Weeth, giving his own account of the bullength ship and the strength of the proposed of the propo Wyeth, the man and his art.

Weeth's paintings affect and his understanding of the subject matter, his feelings towards his art and his environment. This account is as fascinating as it is gentle, as revealing as it is vivid.

In contrast to Wyeth's openness, Ms. Corn's commentaries are pedantic, pretentious and boring. Her efforts to pigeon-hole Wyeth's art as to school and style seem absurdly unim-portant when compared with Wyeth's own lucid, if un-scholarly, interpretation.

But the book is worth having despite Ms. Corn's polysyllabic major works, well-produced in . and affordable, a welcome ad-color, covering his water dition to anyone's bookshelf.

THE ART OF ANDREW WYETH, by Wanda M. Corn. Little, Brown. $9.95.

The other day I met a young woman who was lamenting the sale of a handsome old house she had her eye on for months. She'd been coveting it, not as a family home, but as the ideal site for the art gallery she'd like to establish some day, when her ship comes in. "It was perfect," she mourned, "and I wanted to fill it full of nothing but Canadian art." "Oh, well," I told her, "if it's Canadian art you're interested in, all you need is an old underground gazage. Preferably with a creek running through the middle of it. That way all your customers will know at once that everything you're selling is authentic."

Now the sad part about this little exchange is that my new acquaintance understood exactly what I meant. Which suggests that it's high time to stop beating about the bush and state flatly what S. M. Crean argues so indefatigably in Who's Afraid of Canadian Culture? Canadian artists who at-who's Afraid of Canadian Culture? Canadian artists who at-tempt to create a distinctive Canadian culture have become interlopers in their own country. If you don't believe me, try reading S. M. Crean with an open mind. Her book runs the gamut of the arts from radio and television, films, painting, music and theatre to magazines and books, with chapters on education and "political culture" thrown in for good measure. Little of what she has to say can be classed as news, but it's good to have it all encompassed in one up-to-date volume.

If you want to know what the Canadian position on cable TV and the U.S. border stations actually is, it's here. So are the sorry history of our feature film industry, the reasons for the engineered decline of CBC television after 1957, and why the bottom dropped out of the school textbook market for Canadian publishers in the sixties.

Crean is what's become known as a "radical nationalist". She herself distinguishes between "positive nationalism that strives for a democratic form of self-nationalism that strives for a democratic form of self-determination and the reactionary nationalism that tries to impose its will on other groups and cultures." Canadians, she declares, "must resist European and American concepts of national culture being a single, unified entity, because it obviously does not fit into our heterogenous and highly regionalized 'national' culture."

When I first began reading Who's Afraid of Canadian Culture, I had the idea that the book was a bad sign of the times. Canadian nationalism seemed to be splitting into two factions, one of which concerned itself with the economy and the other with culture. The split was due, I had decided, to disillusionment among nationalists who believed the economy's cause to be already lost. What else was there to turn to, then, but the preservation and encouragement of all that was left — our native culture?

Crean, however, simply points out the relationship of culture to what is happening to this country's economy: "The multi-national corporations, by way of protecting their investment in foreign countries, are vitally concerned about the political and social environment abroad and Canada is no exception." (To put it in purply economic terms if the contribution of the country's company terms. exception." (To put it in purely economic terms, if a company wants to introduce a new product to a new market, its task is made a whole lot easier if the "new market" has been trained to think just like the folks back home.)

The villain of the piece, of course is U.S. imperialism, although Crean amusingly points out that Canadians were saved from its advances in the early years by "the aesthetic bias of a colonial upper crust nurtured on the culture of a more genteel empire." To save the situation, Crean calls for a "national cultural policy" which "must, at least initially and within Canada, be anti-American." Such a policy should be easy enough to formulate, for all those Royal Commissions ("the one official forum where discussion of our pational situation and future options has been frank") have national situation and future options has been frank") have pointed the way.

If the nationalist sentiments expressed in Who's Afraid of Canadian Culture? fail to impress, the book should at least succeed in convincing its readers that if Canadian culture seems to be thinly spread at times, it's partly because the creative vigor of our artists is continually being sapped by the need to organize and protest against official injustice, timidity and ignorance. To sum up the substance of Crean's message, being a serious artist in Canada today is like playing on a three-man hockey team against the Philadelphia Flyers with no referee. And afterwards, being told that the game was a 'contest of excellence.

Coming to Terms With Flying Saucers

By JULIAN REID

God Drives a Flying Saucer, proclaims the title of a recent paperback — one of many. Gods From Outer Space; Gods and Spaceman in the Ancient East; The Spaceships of Ezekiel — endlessly they proliferate, reiterating the new gospel.

Plainly, millions are eager to believe that human destiny was once guided by a succession of "ancient astronauts," who were directly or indirectly responsible for the achievements of Man's early civilizations. They were our teachers and spiritual parents; they built the pyramids; perhaps it was one of them who died on the Cross. Perhaps, too, they still watch over certainly, eager thousands await their return.

Among believers, it is an item of faith that the reality of these interventions has béen conclusively proven by researchers like Erich von Daniken. But has it? In The Ancient Visitors, Daniel Cohen takes a brisk, sensible look at the available evidence, from the Piri Re'is Map to the strange markings on the Nazca Desert and finds it, at best, overwhelmingly in-

There is a difference between evidence and mysteries," Cohen notes acutely, "which is not always obvious in the argument of those who believe in extraterrestrial contact." Indeed, one typical characteristic of such believers one they share, alas, with convention archeologists - is their eagerness to dispose of every mystery by explaining it away in simplistic terms. Few seem capable of seeing beyond the narrow bounds of their own preconceptions — let alone of imagining that anyone might confront existence in a manner radically dif-

"We of the modern world," as Cohen says, "tend to underestimate the infinite time and patience people of past ages would lavish upon their crafts, and we tend to look upon the results of such labor with uncomprehending awe and quickly attribute them to magic or the intervention of superior beings." In the ultimate analysis, what we are demonstrating is our lack of faith — faith in the capacities of our ancestors, and in our own unrealized potentialities.

Yet sensible as Cohen is, I can't help feeling he is somehow missing the point. His approach is no less fundamentally reductive than that of the ill-informed mystery-mongers he is showing up Nobody could accuse him of confounding mysteries with evidence — he is all too eager to dismiss them out of hand.

But mysteries persist in manifestin themselves; we cannot rationalize all of them away. One scientist who recognizes this is Jacques Vallee, whose latest book, The Invisible College, is probably the most important treatment to date of the UFO

Years of study have convinced Vallee that UFOs are real — though their

into any conventional pigeonhole. proposed explanation squares with all the known facts, not even the widely accepted

paceship" theory. UFOs are solidly physical objects; yet they persistently violate basic laws of physics, and their manifestations often display a dreamlike air of surreality. Their most enduring effects are psychic, not physical — people who encounter them are permanently changed; some, like Uri Geller, are endowed with apparently paranormal powers. In general, UFO apparitions seem closer to the realm of miracles than to the solid, no-nonsense world of familiar reality.

We must move beyond our conventional categories of thought, Vallee insists, if we are to get to the heart of such elusive occurrences. "The UFO phenomenon is a direct challenge to the arbitrary dichotomy between physical reality and spiritual reality." It confronts us with "a pattern of manifestations, opening the gates to a spiritual level, pointing a way to a different consciousness, and producing irrational, absurd events in their wake.

The only practicable way to deal with its more accessible after-effects - "the psychic effects it produces in its observers." On this level, Vallee con-cludes tentatively, UFOs are part of a psychic "control system," influencing the development of Man's collective technology that transcends the physical and is capable of manipulating our reality, generating a variety of altered states of consciousness and of emotional perceptions. Human belief is being controlled a capable of the purpose may be to and conditioned. The purpose may be to change our concepts of the universe."

To rationalists like Cohen and rationalizers like von Daniken, Vallee's speculations must sound wild, woolly, and thoroughly objectionable. They do not dispel the Mystery pressing in on us; instead, they Intensify it. Yet the task confronting us is not to explain away the Unknown, but to come to terms with it - and it, not us, is the dictator of those terms.

God does not drive a flying saucer— the belief that He does reduces the Unknown to the infantile. Yet, for all its naivety, it is itself a manifestation of the ongoing transformation of human con-sciousness Vallee is proclaiming. Behind tt, if we are willing to look, we can catch shadowy glimpses of the realm he calls Magonia: "a different level of existence, a reality that seems to cut through our own at right angles." A place of abiding mystery; a repository for the passing

"Canada" is a coffeetable book. If you have any American or English friends, or friends who live in Australia, New Zealand or Pago Pago, they'll be impressed. I don't think Canadians will be impressed.

There are over a hundred full-page, color photographs.

The essays (contributed by Pierre Berton and Jean-Louis Gagnon).are warm. The poetry is simple and poignant. Yet the book is hard to believe. It doesn't have any credibility.

The poems, by an Ojibwa Indian and an Inuit, are not bitter. They do not mention the Bureau of Indian Affairs, or other corrupt inventions. They tell of a simple world that is gone now but still lives in the native imagination, a world where the spirit of nature was everywhere and in all things, before the Europeans came.

Each photograph is captioned. For example, "A smiling French-Canadian construction worker and a lovely freckled girl of English descent." The captions are in English, French and German. That's right, German. Canada is published by a Canadiañ firm, but it's printed and bound in Germany. I was half-expecting to see a picture of a "smiling unemployed

Pierre Berton is still going strong. In his essay titled "My Country," he says that "Indians look very much like the rest of us, in their cloth caps and wool shirts . . . " Aren't Canadians tired of his drivel yet?

I saw photographs of autumn trees, the Vancouver skyline, the Montreal skyline, a Toronto disco, a happy Indian boy on page 112, and much much more, but I missed the Toronto of winos and Cabbagetown slums that Canadians see. I missed politicians riding in limousines. I missed the poverty of east end Montreal. I missed the old man I saw in Ottawa sleeping on the frozen sidewalk because he had nowhere to go. I missed pictures of the real Canada. I missed them because they're not there. Why call the book Canada? Why not Printed In Germany? Or Son Of Between Friends?—

All About Hollywood But Not for Movies

By WAYNE WARGA

"Even with all of my literary success it's been very hard to bridge that image of actors as dumb — the dumbest coming from Hollywood, of course. And whatever else they do, And whatever else they do, they do not become writers. As an actor-turned-novelist, I'm an upstart. I had to detach myself from the glamor. Totally. So I moved to New York. "I'll never get out of the movies. I love them. I love this town. It is especially nice to be welcomed back as a different kind of success."

The novel, best consumed in whole and in order, is a well-written and fractious study of movies can bring. Of the four parts of the book, Fedora is far and away the best-evocative of a driving curiosity pursuing the legendary Fedora, a seemingly enigmatic and ageless movie star. It has already been likened to the work of the novelist John Fowles: in the sense that Fowles can handle the exotic and erotic, the reference is accurate.

Fowles, however, is a great stylist of the English language. Tryon, on the other hand, uses the language to tell engrossing and fascinating stories.
